Description of Training Program:

The program prepares students on infection control and safely obtaining specimen collections on patients in and outside of the hospital setting. Students are taught basic knowledge of proper blood collection methods using precautions and proper techniques. Students learn the proper names of needles, blood collection tubes, and safe transportation of specimens. We combine students' learning experience with hands-on training via onsite lab and clinical experience. Because we are partnered with the National Healthcareer Association, we gear our didactics following their criteria to prepare students to pass their certification.
